Don't Avoid the Doc

Australian Unity

If you are a male – read this – it might save your life. If you are a woman pass it on to the men in your life.

Most Australian men avoid going to the doctor unless it's a necessity or they are so ill they are desperate for some relief. The thought of going to see a medical professional when you are well is not something many men think to do - but it's time this changed.

So many diseases that affect both men and women in western society – heart disease, cancer, diabetes, obesity – are manageable with the help of a GP or specialist. Most importantly, if these conditions are identified earlier rather than later, the impact they have on our lives can often be minimized. The facts are that the longer these conditions go unchecked the more devastating their effects are on our bodies.

Yet men still seem reluctant to see a doctor for screening tests or just a checkup when they are feeling well, or not so well.

Foundation 49, an initiative of Cabrini Health, Victoria, is focused on promoting health awareness amongst men. They emphasize that every hour in Australia, five men die from conditions that are potentially preventable, and that men live on average six years less than women do.

It's important that men make an effort to improve their overall knowledge on health issues that concern them, which will give them the knowledge to make better decisions and identify warning signs that something might not be right.

When should I go and what's involved?

Of course, you should always visit a doctor if you are not feeling well, if you think that something isn't as it should be or is causing you worry.

Be aware of your body and know what's normal for you. Did you always have heartburn like this? When did that ankle start giving you trouble? For how long have you felt depressed? This is important information for you to share with your doctor so he or she can help make diagnoses and recommendations for future care.

It's also good to know your own family history, so take the time to ask your parents what health issues they have had, and what illnesses their own parents and grandparents had. Sometimes it can be hard to find this out, but knowing that you have a family history of cancer, diabetes, heart disease or other conditions is important information to share with your doctor so you can both be extra vigilant against these particular problems.

As well as this, men (and women) should have an annual check up that involves basic screening tests. Your doctor will do a range of things including ordering blood tests and perhaps some other tests that will help them better understand your state of health. These tests will vary on your age, your risk status and any requests or concerns you may have.

Some tests may even be a bit unpleasant, like a rectal examination to check for prostate cancer. If the thought of this puts you off, ask any woman what it's like to have a mammogram, vaginal examination or pap smear! They'll tell you it's not much fun at all - but far better than the possibility of becoming seriously ill or dying because you were scared to have an unpleasant, yet quick, test. It's a fast, routine check your doctor will have performed hundreds if not thousands of times, so the best idea is to get it over and done with and move on.

Make sure you also ask your doctor to address any specific concerns you may have – like funny looking moles, a persistent cough, allergies, headaches... anything concerning your body that has raised even a small amount of worry or bother. Even if it's nothing serious, you'll feel better for getting it attended to.

Finally, be honest with your doctor about your health and lifestyle, and be willing to take suggestions and ideas they may have on board. For instance, a diet and exercise program may be suggested to reduce the risk of heart disease developing or to help you manage your weight. It's important to act on these suggestions, even if they don't involve taking medicine. Talk to your doctor about it further. Ask them for help if you don't think you'll be motivated to do it. Ask them what your ideal weight should be and when you should come back for a review.

Excuses, excuses

Men need to change their thinking on when it's time for a doctor's visit. If any of these 'reasons' for not going to a doctor on a regular basis sound familiar, think seriously about addressing them and the possible risk you're facing in not going to the doctor...

'I'm so busy I don't have time'

You probably are very busy and making time for a doctor's appointment when you're feeling OK isn't even on your list of priorities. But clear a space in your diary and do it. It will only take about an hour or so to see your doctor and get things like blood tests done and then that's it for another year. Think of all the insignificant things you do each day and ask yourself if a couple of hours spent on your own health – the most important thing you have - is worth it.

'I feel fine'

Great! Make sure you'll keep feeling this way as you get older and your body changes by becoming more aware of your body and preventing future ill health through regular check ups.

'I can handle it myself'

Humans are very capable and can handle much of what life throws at them, but all of us have vulnerabilities and will need help and support if we become sick. Don't try and be a hero or think that bravado and 'soldiering on' will make something go away. If it's something relatively minor, then your doctor will be able to help you manage the problem until it does resolve, and if it's a more serious issue then you will eventually need help anyway – but by then it may be too late to cure or manage effectively. Best to see a doctor early and get help when you can still be helped and most importantly, avoid unnecessary pain or discomfort.

'I don't want to get any bad news'

All of us are fearful of being told we have a dread disease or condition that won't go away. But consider the option – not knowing and possibly dying? The likelihood of being told you do have a serious problem is pretty small anyway, and that risk is reduced even further if you have regular tests and checkups and are aware of your own body.

'I don't want anyone touching me'

If you don't like the thought of being touched or having any sort of invasive test done, you're not alone. Choose a doctor you feel comfortable with – men often feel happier seeing a male doctor, just as many women feel happier seeing a female. Remember that doctors are professionals who are trained to help people. Seeing and touching your body is routine for them and nothing you tell them or they see is likely to shock them.

'I can't afford it'

If you're a bit strapped for cash, choose a clinic that bulk bills and be reassured by the fact that most basic medical tests are covered under Medicare, so you won't be out of pocket much, if at all.

So, there really is no need to avoid it. Do it for yourself. Do it for your family. See a doctor when you're sick and for regular check ups and enjoy a long and healthy life.

Please contact John on 6217 7000 for more information.

The Fundamentals of Project Management

This one day workshop provides you with an introduction to project management. It introduces you to the concepts in project management, project planning and the project cycle. The workshop will cover the use of Microsoft Project for project scheduling, resourcing and reporting.

Productivity and Time Management

This one day productivity management workshop will help you plan your day, work towards your goals, prioritise your workload and start you on the road to becoming more effective.

Through use of a multi featured personal organiser (paper diary), practical exercises, and group discussions we will show you how to get on top of your workload and achieve more in your work and personal life. Acorn will supply the paper diary.

Basic English for Public Servants

Basic English for Public Servants is an interactive one day workshop that helps participants improve their basic grammar, punctuation and word usage skills. It will also help writers to further develop their skills, confidence and professionalism by helping them become more conscious of their use of language. This workshop is ideal for NESB staff, people with limited English knowledge, recent appointees to supervisor roles, recent graduates with more technical expertise and anyone else who wants to revise what was taught in School.

Fundamental Writing Skills for NESB staff in the APS

Fundamental Writing Skills for NESB is a two day workshop which provides a sound basis for written communication. This workshop is particularly valuable for those people whom English is a second language. This is a slower paced version of Fundamental Writing Skills concentrating on punctuation and grammar.

Fundamental Writing Skills for Public Servants

Fundamental Writing Skills provides a sound basis for written communication. This workshop is particularly valuable for those people who may not have had a good grounding in the technicalities of the English language at school, or for whom English is a second language. Fundamental Writing Skills is also a valuable refresher course for the more capable writer who wishes to hone their skills. Added benefits of attending include;

- Module revealing all the tricks to successfully addressing selection criteria
- How to best structure letters, memos, short reports, proposals, emails and their application in the workplace.

Write to Succeed in the Public Sector

There are many messages we communicate when we write for an audience. Grammatical errors, poorly constructed sentences and longwinded language may indicate that the writer is subordinate, unprofessional or clumsy. This workshop teaches writers simple techniques for writing clearer, more convincing and professional letters, reports and emails to succeed in the workplace. This workshop is designed for those with a good grasp of the English language and written communication. Attendees will develop the skills to;

- Minimise the use of bureaucratic language and raise understanding with the reader
- Improve their writing persona and use more dynamic language
- Deal with complaints and write more professional reports.

Report & Ministerial Writing

Ministerial correspondence and report writing (including briefs and submissions) can be the most important and challenging writing that you will face as an APS officer. Writing ministerials and reports often means having to work under pressure to meet tight deadlines on policy sensitive issues. This workshop is designed to equip you with the skills and confidence to tackle the time sensitivity and pressure of writing in the Public Sector. Participants will learn;

- Explore emerging solutions
- The importance of ministerial correspondence in the APS
- The structure and language of a ministerial
- The characteristics and challenges of a good ministerial
- Understanding your audience and the communication barriers to overcome them
- How to write a short report
- The structure and layout of a report
- The dos and don'ts of report writing.

Writing Skills for Executive Assistants

As an Executive Assistant or Personal Assistant your communication skills, especially your writing skills reflect your section and your boss. Your tasks may include writing letters, emails, draft Ministerials, minutes or even researching material to develop a PowerPoint presentation. The ability to proofread other staff's documents and provide feedback may be another expected task! Some of the topics covered are minute taking, common punctuation mistakes, and the power of plain English. This workshop is suitable for those who are new to the role or those who would like a refresher.

Professional Speaking Skills

A professional sounding voice is a stepping-stone to career success while weak, sloppy speech is often associated with sloppy work practise. If you run meetings, address the public, engage in teleconferencing or speak to the media you simply must attend this workshop. This Workshop teaches you simple, yet powerful techniques to;

- Sound clear, polished and sincere
- Unlock the power of their natural voice
- Captivate attention with colourful speech
- Exude energy, enthusiasm and charisma

Train the Trainer Essentials

This one day workshop is designed for staff who have little or no experience in the delivery of training or who would simply like a refresher. Emphasis will be placed on practical skills, for example planning a session using interactive training activities and facilitator techniques to encourage learners. Participants will need to bring a two minute training session with them to work on during the practical session.

Dynamic Presentations

Fear of public speaking is the number one fear of most people. This practical one day workshop will provide participants with the tools and techniques to assist them either to “think on their feet” or present in a formal situation. Some of the topics covered in the workshop are handling nerves, planning your presentation, speech structures and how to practise effectively.

Develop Unlimited Confidence

Confidence is the world’s most sought after personality trait, but no one really knows how to get it, or on days that they have confidence, how they can hold onto it. This workshop is designed to help participants;

- Identify areas where they can build their confidence
- Learn how to turn self doubt and negative self talk into self belief and positive thinking
- Stop the cycle of excuses
- Improve productivity by improving their self perception
- Attend this workshop to find your inner strength and let it loose on the world

Stress Management

Learn how to unwind, manage stress and build resilience. This one day workshop is designed to help participants understand the insidious nature of stress and develop effective strategies to cope with stressful life events. It highlights the importance of building resilience in the longer term to create a balanced lifestyle and deal with the stressful situations.

Emotional Intelligence for Women

This workshop is for professional women motivated to achieve success in business and more effectively integrate work and life more effectively. Attending this workshop will ensure that those who want to become star performers improve their performance and leadership effectiveness to shine from the inside out. Participants will learn about the nature of Emotional Intelligence, its application at work and how to develop competencies by building emotional abilities where they are lacking. As part of the workshop attendees; complete an online assessment to discover their current competencies and where they might improve and are entitled to follow up phone or online session to help achieve prescribed goals.

Developing Your Career

Developing Your Career is an interesting one day workshop for people who wish to develop their careers. Topics include an introduction and overview of the APS environment, taking stock of you, developing a strong written application, communication and influencing, marketing your career potential, look and sound like a winner and interview skills to win that job.

Assertiveness Skills for Women in the Public Service

This workshop is tailored for women who would like to develop the confidence to assert their position within their team, pro-actively seek opportunities and progress in their career within the Public Service.

By learning to assertively negotiate their position, participants will be empowered to achieve both their professional and personal goals.

Dealing with Difficult Clients, Colleagues and Situations

Do you have to deal with difficult clients, customers, team members, subordinates, supervisors or family members? If the answer is yes then this practical one day workshop will help you to understand and manage difficult people and situations. This workshop covers the following: things that typically annoy your customers or clients, why complaints are useful, how to calm an upset person a practical six step model for difficult people, ways to deal with abusive customers, how to control your feelings, stress management techniques and situations that upset customers. It is suggested that attendees bring some real life examples with them.

The New Supervisor

This workshop is for people new to the role of supervisor. Attendees will gain an understanding of what is expected of their role as supervisor and how to manage confidently and achieve the goals and targets set for groups. This practical workshop develops skills in leading and supervising small or large groups. Through a combination of theory, groups and individual exercises, topics covered include;

- Leadership styles and behaviours
- Effective delegation

Goal Setting and Self-Motivation

This one day workshop is for busy people to help them focus on what they want from their career and life. This workshop will inspire you to set goals and retain the motivation to follow through on their implementation. Topics covered include: why we set goals; long and short term goals; elements of motivation and goal setting.

Selection Criteria and Interview Skills

Applying for jobs can be a stressful experience for most people. This practical one day workshop will help you confidently answer selection criteria and undertake job interviews. Attendees will examine staff selection criteria in order to understand and define the tasks and information required by them. In the afternoon session attendees will have the opportunity to understand the interview process by acting as both the applicant and interview board member.

The New Executive Assistant

This one day workshop is to help EAs effectively fulfil their role in the modern APS workplace. We would recommend the workshop for any EA who has been in the role for less than a couple of years or who would like to brush up on their skills.

Topics covered include understanding the role of an EA in a modern organisation, communicate effectively and assertively with your clients and colleagues, work collaboratively with your manager/s and the team and planning and prioritising.

Influencing Skills

Would you like to be more effective in the way you put forward your ideas and plans to supervisors and team members so that you can get the job done? Are you getting busier and busier at work and need to get outcomes in a shorter time-frame so that you meet deadlines? If you are then this one day workshop will help you to be a more effective and influential communicator.

Communication and Negotiation Skills

Everyone negotiates. Everyone communicates - with colleagues, customers and clients. Effective negotiators get a better outcome for themselves and their organisation. This course will help you communicate more effectively with everyone and increase your confidence when negotiating.

Productive Meetings and Minute Taking

Are you tired of meetings that achieve nothing? Do you wish that you had a magic wand and could abolish all meetings? Do you have a fantasy of attending a meeting that actually achieves something useful and helpful? Attend our Productive Meetings workshop or send your staff (and bosses) and learn how to turn your fantasy into a reality. This workshop will help you be a more effective contributor to meetings whatever your role.

Essentials of Project Management (Two day)

We encounter projects everyday, whether they be organising a wedding, undergoing house renovations or large and often complex work projects. Most people will have experienced complications when trying to manage multiple projects and they are often done on an ad hoc basis. This workshop is for people who want to manage projects more efficiently, effectively and with a higher degree of professionalism. Attendees will learn how to;

- Handle projects in a logical manner
- Communicate effectively and insight team spirit
- Gain approval for your project and get others enthused
- Manage your team and achieve your goals.

Improving Client Service for Public Servants

The most powerful messages an organisation will send are those communicated by their staff. The manner in which staff members communicate with external and internal stakeholders will primarily determine the perceptions people have about an organisation. This practical workshop develops service skills for those with internal and/or external customers. Through a series of group exercises, theoretical situations, videos and discussions, you will learn the skills necessary for providing consistent, high quality customer service including;

- communication skills,
- dealing with difficult people,
- personality types, and
- self-motivation.

Assertiveness Skills in the APS environment

Every day we are faced with situations that require us to be assertive. The importance of being assertive and an effective communicator in the workplace has become crucial to maintaining relationships in a productive workplace. This one day workshop will build your knowledge and introduce a number of skills to assist you in communicating effectively, professionally and with appropriate assertiveness.

Negotiating Skills

All staff are involved in negotiating with colleagues, customers and clients. When we are effective negotiators, we can organise a better outcome for ourselves and our organisation. We also are better able to service our customers and clients as we look for Win:Win situations.

Emotional Intelligence at Work

This fascinating one day workshop is for those who have attended the New Supervisor, Emotional Intelligence for Women or who just want to improve their skills. It is suitable for men and women. This workshop is for people at all levels of any organisation – government or private sector – and employees who want to improve leadership abilities, enrich relationships, extend influence and expand the personal resources required to manage life's challenges and mental demands.
