

Assertiveness in the APS environment How to have the skills to be more assertive and to “get your needs met” in the workplaceand maintain good working relationships!!

Every day we are faced with situations that require us to be assertive. The importance of being assertive and an effective communicator in the workplace has become crucial to maintaining relationships in a productive workplace. The way we relate to others and communicate our needs within a professional environment impacts on our good relations with people. We need to work well with others, learn from others and not only respect others but be respected ourselves.

This one day workshop will build your knowledge and introduce a number of skills to assist you in communicating effectively, professionally and with appropriate assertiveness.

Outcomes

On completion of this workshop participants will be able to:

- Understand what assertiveness is and why it is important.
- Identify ways in which they would like to be more assertive.
- Communicate effectively and assertively with your clients and colleagues.
- Recognise their own responses to ‘pressure situations’ and develop ‘positive self-talk’.
- Understand and use “I” statements.
- Understand active listening.
- Recognise defensive and assertive responses in difficult/confronting situations.
- Give and receive feedback effectively.
